

IRREGULARITIES IN THE 2020 ELECTION CONFIRMED BY A STATEWIDE CITIZEN-LED CANVASSING EFFORT AND FORENSIC ANALYSIS IN MESA COUNTY

Upwards of 12% of Colorado's November 2020 Measures and Races Need to Be Questioned

An independent canvassing audit of 4,601 voters found:

- voters that didn't live at the stated address during the election
- voters still listed at the address in question after the resident confirmed they didn't live there (couldn't confirm if they lived there at the time of the election)
- voters with commercial or vacant lot addresses
- voters whose vote was not counted
- voters who didn't vote but had ballot cast for them
- voter data manipulation

Mesa County Results

- Wireless access to voting machines violated state election laws.
- Machines altered vote results.
- Electronic audit records were deleted that would prove outside interference.

Conflict of Interest among elected officials

- Pam Anderson (Republican Secretary of State candidate): Director of Center for Tech and Civic Life (CTCL) when $331M+ in Zucker-bucks was doled out to counties to influence the 2020 election. Amistad Project launched a multi-million dollar lawsuit on behalf of several states against the CTCL for illegally injecting private funds into public elections. Pam Anderson is named in the lawsuit.
- Matt Crane (Executive Director of Colorado County Clerks Association): Wife Lisa Flannagan-Crane worked with Eric Coomer at Dominion and were both named on the Dominion proposal with Colorado in 2015 (Matt was the Arapahoe County Clerk & Recorder during this time). He is also a Board member of Voatz, a mobile voting tech company, and is featured on a flyer for Global Mobile's text-2-cure product.
